The Ella E. Flemings School is an historic schoolhouse located in Tewksbury, Massachusetts. The original one-room school was constructed ca. 1859. Through its long history, the Ella E. Flemings School was moved and twice enlarged in order to continue meeting the changing needs of a once-rural community. The school was a pioneer in the field of education as it was among the first, if not the first, training school for student teachers in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. After almost 150 years of service to the children of the Town of Tewksbury, the last students left this historic schoolhouse in 2004.

On Tuesday, November 28, 2023 at 7:00PM, please join author William "Bill" Pavao in a discussion about his newly-published book entitled, The Ella E. Flemings School: Tewksbury's Little Red Schoolhouse. Bill is looking forward to sharing the history of this beloved schoolhouse along with the stories of some of the people who dedicated their lives to educating the children of Tewksbury for almost a century and a half.

William Pavao never attended the Ella E. Flemings School, but was educated in the Tewksbury Public Schools until he was in the ninth grade.
